A word from the president

Tis the time of year when witches goblins, gremlins, princesses and pirates come from all corners in search of treats.

There's something delightful about costumes, cool weather, orange-and-purple color schemes and maybe even goosebumps from things that go bump in the night.

October is a month of mystery.

And some of our neighbors have beautiful, elaborate or spooky displays worth seeing.

If time allows, take a drive around the neighborhood and let us know whose home is worth celebrating and admiring. Thanks for staying young at heart. See you in November.

Many rakes & pickers, cleaner park

Thanks to everyone who turned out for our second annual park clean up! In addition to a chance to enjoy some pretty October weather, neighbors gathered for an hour to help spruce up the park in advance of our fall events. We do clean up nicely, if we do say so ourselves.

Be aware of scams targeting the elderly

As much as we'd like to think otherwise, there are scammers out there who prey on others for their own advantage.

We have been seeing too many of these warnings from government officials and even from neighbors on Nextdoor.

Some of our elders come from a generation when you could shake on a deal and your word was gold - so they may be more susceptible than those who came of age in an era of identify theft and malicious phishing.

Keep an eye out for unusual activity in the neighborhood and if you have an elder neighbor, let them know when you hear about the latest scams.

They are often targeted because they have a nest egg, because they may have memory issues or because they may be too ashamed to report being scammed.

Thanks for taking care of each other.

Sign drive continues

The Palo Verde Park Neighborhood Council voted to purchase another round of 8 signs in August.

That means we've still got about 15 perimeter streets without a formal introduction.

Check out our Go Fund Me page. Any amount is welcome and gets us closer to our goal!
